Can't Stop The Music At STORMFRONT

Louis Mayfield 13 October 2020

MUSOS: Stormfront Students Imogen Lyons, Amaya Skinner and Charlotte Lyons proudly display their Piano Exam Certificates.

In what has been a very different year for everyone due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Whyalla's Stormfront Productions has been able to continue its Music Tuition services via Online Delivery in 2020.

As restrictions have allowed in-person, Stormfront have been committed to ensuring their students remain safe while maintaining access to quality music education.

One such service has been Music Exam preparation, with 33 individual student videos filmed and submitted for assessment in 2020.

"We are grateful we could continue this service online, and present our students for Exams via Video Submission" Stormfront's Alison Hams said.

Utilising two national Examination Boards this year for students of piano and voice, Stormfront has again had a 100% pass rate for all candidates who were aged from four to adult, with many achieving Honours and High Distinction.

"We pride ourselves on providing performance opportunities for our students, so when that became unviable this year, the chance to set goals, and develop a different set of skills to prepare for a professional on-camera performance has been really worthwhile" said Alison.
